Krabi province

One of the southern provinces of Thailand is Krabi, which attracts tourists with its natural beauty. According to local law are loud watersports like Jet-ski is forbidden, just as renting sunbeds and sun umbrellas on the beach. Unlike Phuket and Samui, Krabi avoids the overcrowded masstourism. Several restaurants and bars can be found here, but just in a limited number. Only 10 minutes from the mainstreet and You are in the jungle or on the abandoned beach.

There are 154 smaller and bigger islands in the province, for example Phi Phi or Lanta, and these are just some of the most famous islands. You can visit some uninhabited islands as well, they can be witch reached by a boat in a few minutes.

The easiest and fastest way to get to Krabi is by airplane. The international airport is small, not crowded. It takes one hour to get to Bangkok or Kuala Lumpur and there are also direct flight to Singapore and Koh Samui.

You can also travel by bus, train and scheduled boat even by night.

The group tours offered in this prospect, include the transfer from the accomodation and back, free drinking water, coffee and fruit juice. If required protective gear, snorkelling masks for boat tours and last but not least the insurance too. The lunch is also included on full-day tours. We are working with experienced and reliable travel organizers and tour guides together. All of them speaks english very well.

This brochure is the result of two years hard work. Our motivation is to introduce this woderful province to the tourist. It is worth to print this brochure and take it with you for Your journey because it is the only detailed guide of Krabi.
